Clare Risdon

Pinhoe Pharmacy

The dispenser who identified potential cellulitis on a patient's wound.

When a local GP surgery was busy, one of Pinhoe Pharmacy's dispensers completed a walk-in acute assessment for a 60-year-old patient who had an open wound. The patient had fragile skin from steroid use and old age, so Clare treated them with atrauman dressings and bandages and told them to come back in three days so that she could check the wound's progress. When they returned, the wound was red and warm to the touch. Suspecting possible cellulitis, Clare called to arrange a GP appointment for the patient as soon as possible. They were subsequently seen and given antibiotics. The patient has now recovered and the wound has healed. Impressed with the care they had received, they wrote to Clare and thanked her for the care and attention she had given them.
